The services of the clerks permanently employed, under existing laws, could not be dispensed with, without injury to the public interest. Indeed, the number, under the present organization of the department, is insufficient to a prompt discharge of the public business.

The following table will exhibit the relative proportion of business and clerical force of the department at various periods.

STATEMENT—Continued.

| Years. | Missions. | Consulates. | Total. | Clerks fixed by law. | Compensation. |

From the above, it will be seen that, as compared with 1827, the number of missions and consulates have increased more than fifty-three per centum, whilst the increase in the number of clerks has not been thirty per centum; and that, compared with 1818, the number of missions and consulates had, in 1844, increased at the rate of one hundred and seventy-one per centum, that of the clerks at the rate of forty per centum.
